

The Link between Permaculture, Social Licence and Community Engagement

Community Development is one of the three pillars of fair benefit distribution (the others being local employment and local business development). Edge5 and SLO believe that leaving stable, healthy, self-reliant rural communities with water security; affordable and reliable sources of nutritious, locally produced food and productive natural and managed landscapes built on pre-existing local natural and community resources is a worthy aspirational development legacy for any business. We also believe that Edge5 Permaculture and SLO can deliver this legacy using flexible, cost-effective, low-risk solutions tailored to company and location specific needs.
